What a complete application looks like

STEP 1: Registration

Global Participation Fund offers two different grants

The Global Participation Fund (GPF) was developed to remedy current gaps in organizational participation in ORCID in countries in the Global South which are currently under-represented. The GPF will initially provide competitive grants under two different grant programs:

1. Grants for Community Development and Outreach, which can be used to financially support local partners to build ORCID Communities of Practice in currently under-represented regions; and support local outreach, training, and tech support resources for the creation and growth of ORCID consortia that serve those regions.
2. Grants for Technical Integration, which can be used to fund software development to build and update ORCID integrations in open-source systems that will enable or facilitate participation in ORCID in currently under-represented regions and to support the creation of technical documentation, outreach, and support for resources created through the grants.

Awards under both programs will be available in the amount of US$5,000–20,000, with a duration of 12 months.

What stood out about the current grantees

- Complete applications that demonstrated impact and fed into the objectives
- Projects provide a multiplier effect which has both direct and indirect impact in the long run
- Demonstrating value for money in their applications, with efficient use of resources
- Demonstrated track record of success with similar projects

Grant Monitoring and Evaluation

We're looking for proposals that have the most effective impact on GPP objectives

Preference will be given to proposals with demonstrated ability to:

- Provide effective impact most efficiently
- Deliver impact to multiple Fund objectives
- Target the Focus Communities

We have established seven evaluation criteria to determine which grantees are most likely to have the largest impact on the fund objectives

1. Benefits the Fund's Target Communities
2. Supports local partners
3. Program completeness / justification
4. Feasibility
5. Relationship to the organization's mission/goals
6. Use of resources / approach efficiency
7. Sustainability

Each criterion will be rated on a scale of zero to four

Criterion	4 Exemplary	3 Adequate	1 Needs Improvement	0 Insufficient Evidence
Benefits the Fund Target Group	The project is highly targeted toward this group in specific ways that demonstrate a distinct understanding of the Fund Target Group. The proposers have demonstrated specific successes in benefiting this Group with similar projects in the past.	The project focuses on the Fund Target Group in a general way. The proposal doesn't demonstrate any specific knowledge or insight about the Target Group. The proposers have worked with the Target Group but in ways that are different from the project proposed.	The project describes a project that they imagine will benefit the target group, though have little to no experience in working with the Target Group.	The Target Group is not specifically mentioned or inaccurate information about this Group is provided.
Supports local partners	All members of the project delivery team are local partners with deep relationships with others in the community that they may leverage for support.	Some members of the project delivery team are local partners. If the proposal does not describe other local relationships, it includes a specific plan for developing these relationships.	The proposer is local, though little to no evidence is provided about working with others in the community.	Unconvincing or no evidence of working with local partners.
Program completeness / justification	Strong rationale and significance of proposed work. The project addresses specific needs and the approach for addressing them.	The rationale and significance presented are either too broad or too specific, but the overall justification holds.	Weak presentation of project need, or a tenuous argument for the proposer's ability to fulfill the need.	Unconvincing or no evidence of project need, or the proposal does not address the stated need.
Feasibility	The proposed personnel, project activities, timeline and resource use are congruent with project description and outcomes.	The proposal has a tolerable deficiency or overestimates in aspects of the personnel, project activities, timeline, or other resources needed, but outcomes appear achievable despite gaps or leaps.	The project's described personnel, project activities, timelines or other needed resources expose weaknesses in the plan design. Outcomes are unlikely to be achieved in the project's current form.	Insufficient information about personnel, project activities, timelines or other needed resources. Unable to gauge feasibility
Relationship to the organization's mission/goals	The project is highly aligned with the proposer's mission, vision, and goals as well as with that of the community it is designed to serve.	The project aligns with the goals of the organization or with that of the community, but not both.	The project is tangentially but not directly related to the organization's strategic vision or the community's goals	No explicit relationship between the project and the agenda of the proposer's organization or the community.
